Young people, at the helm of the future

A discussion series on future resilience for 18–25 year-olds across Estonia, Lithuania and Finland.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

A group of experts from Estonia, Lithuania and Finland is launching a series of youth discussions across the Baltic Sea region — including young people who have arrived due to war or repression, and members of ethnic and linguistic minorities. We want to hear how you imagine your future: what your life might look like in 15 years, and what skills and support help you get there.

WE'LL TALK ABOUT

- Why thinking about the future matters, and how it shapes our choices today
- Where to look for answers when the world feels uncertain
- What skills help us stay resilient when things don't go as planned
- How you imagine your life in 15 years — and what you want to build
